BIG DEBT DUE TO PAST GENERATIONS

THE REV. S. G. FISHER TELLS GRADUATES

"LIFE IS A RELAY RACE"

Progress of Present Depends on Progress of Past, Minister Says in Commencement Address

Preceding generations have made possible a better start in life for the present young men and women now graduating from high schools, the Rev. S. G. Fisher, an alumnus of the Maryville High School, told this year's graduates at the commencement exercises held last night in the high school auditorium.

Modern mechanisms were made possible by the work of many in all ages, the Reverend Mr. Fisher said. For this reason Mr. Fisher compared life to a relay race—the part run by the present generation depending on the ability of the racers going before.

"The radio age in which we are now living was made possible by the inventions of past years," the speaker continued. "The men who completed the wonderful inventions of this age were touched off, just as in a relay race, by those who have gone before."

By books and other heritages of the past, the progress of the present is possible, the speaker said. Books are only the memory of society, he added.

The relay principle also holds good in the realm of education, Mr. Fisher continued. Compulsory education of the present day is the result of the efforts of those who have gone before who have sacrificed their own individual interests as well as themselves for those who are to follow them.

"The United States of America has also developed through many ages," the speaker continued, and he briefly traced the history of the United States, paying tribute to the pioneers of the nation.

"The persons touched off with a slight lead in the race of life, and then loaf on the job, losing ground, are "yellow" and have sinned against God," Mr. Fisher concluded.

Clement Rickman, valedictorian of the class, gave a splendid valedictory address, expressing much gratitude to the faculty, the citizens of Maryville, and all others who have made possible their graduation from the local school.

The honor class trophy, presented to the school by the Rev. Joseph A. Cooper ,which is to be given to the best all around class each year, was presented last night to the seniors, which class, according to L. E. Ziegler, superintendent of the school of the best class that has ever graduated from the local school.

Three scholarships were awarded last night. L. J. Durbin was awarded a scholarship to the Jackson University of Business at Chillicothe, Mo. Clement Rickman was awarded a scholarship to the Westminister College, and also a scholarship to the University of Missouri.

The senior class presented the school with a cup case at the close of the exercises last night. The presentation was made by Marie Chandler and the acceptance by L. L. St. Clair.

NUTRITION COURSE IS NOW COMPLETED

MISS SMITH, SPECIALIST, FINISHED LESSONS YESTERDAY.

NEXT YEAR'S PROGRAM

Is Now Being Planned to Be Carried Out by Teachers in the Several Schools.

The Red Cross nutrition course of study, which has been given in the schools this spring by Miss Mildred Smith, has been completed, the last lesson was finished yesterday, she announced this morning. The nutrition specialist has been giving lessons in the schools in the county for the last nine weeks this spring.

Miss Smith will be here until May 27, making out the records of the entire work and planning a course of nutrition study that will follow up this year's instructions, for the work next year. These lessons that Miss Smith is now preparing will be carried on by the teachers in the school where nutrition instructions were given last fall and this spring.

The course of instructions this spring which were conducted by the Nodaway County Red Cross chapter, through its specialist, consisted of lessons on care of teeth, health habits, food value of vegetable, fruits, milk, eggs and cereals and also the energy foods, fats, sugars and starches. The last lesson was a balanced diet for a day.

These lessons were given for the first time in all the eight grades in the schools at Barnard, St. Mary's in Maryville, Pickering, Ravenwood, Conception Junction, Guilford. Once a week Miss Smith visited these schools and gave instructions this spring.

The follow-up work in nutrition were advanced courses which were not given during the fall and winter at the following schools in all the eight grades at each school:

Hopkins, Skidmore, Graham, Burlington Junction, Elmo, and in the ten rooms of the Maryville public ward schools and in the nine rooms in the grades at the Washington school building.

Miss Smith also conducted a women's food selection class at Ravenwood one day each week, in which class there were eleven girls from the Ravenwood High School. She followed the regular Red Cross course in food selection in conducting this class.

TO BEGIN MONDAY ON GRADING WORK

OMAHA CONTRACTOR IN CHARGE OF THE PROJECT.

TO EMPLOY 25 WORKERS

Most of Men are From Nebraska, But Few Local Laborers are Engaged for the Work.

Grading work on the ten-mile paved road project south from Maryville, will start Monday morning, E. Warren Gotwals, project engineer in charge of this work, announced this afternoon.

L. S. Miller, a contractor from Omaha, is in charge of this work, and material is being moved on the job this afternoon.

About twenty-five men will be employed by Mr. Miller to do the grading work. Most of them are from Omaha, but a few local laborers have been engaged. Mr. Miller has a sublet contract from the Condon Construction Co., who, in turn, had a sub-let from the Atkinson Paving Co., of Watertown, S. D., the original bidders and contractors for the job. It is thought now that only the Atkinson company will do the paving work, subletting all the rest.

The culvert work will be done by the Pittsburgh-Des Moines Construction Co., of Des Moines, Ia., and it is expected they will start work some time next week. The two companies will go together on the work—one doing the grading and the other the culvert work.

The grading equipment consists of an elevating grader, ten-ton caterpillar tractor, nine dump wagons, and about eight fresnoes graders.

The work camp was established yesterday and all the men are now on the grounds, ready to start work Monday morning.

The grading work will be done at the south end first, and it is thought that the work will be completed by about the middle of November.

The paving will be started about the middle of July, it is thought, and several miles will be put in before the winter months, and the rest of the project will be completed next spring.

A meeting of all project engineers in this division has been called for 4 o'clock this afternoon at the St. Joseph office. N. R. Sack, in charge of road work in this section of the state, issued the call yesterday. There are about twelve project engineers in this division. The meeting this afternoon will be a general conference at which various road problems will be discussed.

Mr. and Mrs. Gotwals motored to St. Joseph this afternoon for this meeting.

Paving Ordinances are Adopted by Council

Final Passage of Paving for West Thompson and West Lincoln Streets Next Friday

The city council introduced paving ordinances for the paving of West Lincoln street from Buchanan street west to 132 feet west of west line of Walnut treet and on West Thompson street west from Buchanan street 982 feet to a point twelve feet west of center of intersection of Walnut and Thompson streets at a special meting last night.

The paving ordinances call for bids to be opened at 2 o'clock in the afternoon of June 11, at the city hall at which time the contracts will be let at the discretion of the city council. The city council adjourned last night to meet next Friday for the final adoption of these two ordinances.

The estimate of the work on Lincoln street is 2,015 lineal feet of curbing, 100 cubic yards dirt excavation, concrete paving re-inforced, seven inches thick, to be re-inforced by 3-4 inches of marginal steel bars and forty pounds of re-inforcing mesh to each 100 square feet of paving, the width of which will be twenty-four feet. The concrete is to be mixed with one part Portland cement, two parts of sand and three and one-half parts crushed stones, with the joints to be filled with bituminous felt filler.

The estimate of the work on Thompson street is 300 cubic yards excavation, concrete curbing 1,712 lineal feet, 2,630 square yards of re-inforced paving, proportioned the same as on Lincoln street.

The cost of the paving shall be paid for by levying and assessing a special tax against the owners of lots and tracts of land abutting the portion of the streets to be paved.

CONFERENCE OVER TAX CUT MEASURE

SESSION IS HELD BEHIND LOCKED DOORS

THROUGH NEXT WEEK

Practically All Minor Items and Amendments to Income Tax Bill Have Been Completed by Committee

Washington, May 17—Behind locked doors, Senate and House conferees today battled over the income tax schedule and other controversal provisions in the 1924 tax reduction bill.

Working on a rapid schedule, the conferees have concluded practically all the minor items and amendments.

Thus far, Democrats have offered but little opposition. The conferees declare they will be able to complete their work late next week.

Washington, May 17.—Prospects of extended contests on the tax reduction bill appeared yesterday as the conferees locked horns on some of the more controversial differences between the Senate and House. It was freely intimated that the conferees probably would have to return to their respective houses for instructions on some of these provisions.

Members of the conference are bound to secrecy on their actions, but it was indicated that among the real stumbling blocks are the senate amendments for publicity of tax returns and a graduated tax on undistributed corporation profits.

House Conferees Firm.

In this connection Secretary Hoover issued a statement yesterday assailing the full publicity proposal as unfair to small business and as opening the door to fraud.

House conferees, it is understood, have stood firm, against this amendment, which was voted into the bill by the Democratic-Republican insurgent coalition in the senate, on motion of Senator Norris, Republican, Nebraska. A similar proposal was rejected by a decisive margin in the house. House leaders privately predicted yesterday this amendment would be turned down.

Both the House and the Senate finance committees, however, agreed to open the tax returns to inspection by certain congressional committees, empowered by resolutions.

Corporate Tax in Controversy.

Denouncing the Senate amendment which would allow inspection of tax returns under rules applying to other public documents, Secretary Hoover declared, "It will enable strong competitors to take advantage of temporary weak conditions of smaller concerns, and on the other hand, fradulent concerns would gladly pay a few thousand dollars a year falsely disguised as profit in order to mislead the public."

Apparently the biggest snag facing the conferees, however, is the senate amendment proposing to lower the flat tax on corporations from 12½ to 9 per cent, and impose in addition a graduated scale of rates on indistributed profits.

The amendment received solid Democratic support in the senate, as well as that of Republican insurgents. Senator Simmons, North Carolina, in charge of the minority tax fight and head of the senate Democratic conferees, is determined to keep the provision in the bill. House Democrats, however, have not reached an agreement on it.

Topeka, Kan., Boy Is Oration Winner

George Chumos Will Represent Fifteen Midwestern States at National Oratorical Contest Washington.

Fifteen midwestern states will be represented at the national Constitution contest in Washington by:

George Chumos, Topeka.

He was given the three judges' decision in the midwestern zone contest in Ivanhoe temple at Kansas City last night.

With the five other contestants, the youth spoke before more than two thousand persons in the big auditorium, and to thousands more over the radio. The orations were broadcast by WDAF, The Star's station.

Several hours before the doors of Ivanhoe temple were scheduled to open, throngs of persons were on the way to the hall in the hope of obtaining seats at the contest.

The ushers had been instructed to open the doors at 7:30 o'clock, but so large a crowd had gathered outside that they admitted the front ranks of the gathering a few minutes before the scheduled time.

It was only a few minutes after the crowd started into the hall until all of the 1,836 seats were filled. Scores of persons stood in the back of the main floor and balcony. And still there was not enough room.

Outside were about five hundred persons, calling to the doorkeepers to "let us in."

A few additional niches were fund—but only a few—in the auditorium.

Two Thousand Outside.

The doors were closed ,but the five hundred remained, and at 8 o'clock almost two thousand persons crowded the intersection of Linwood boulevard and Park avenue—still hoping they could hear the young orators.

And when the contest started, hundreds still remained, many of them tapping on windows and doors and telling persons inside:

"Just one more won't hurt. Let me in."

But from the other side of the plate glass came the answer:

"It can't be done."

Mrs. Chuck Kable, Mrs. Olin Shelton, Miss Marlis Sloan, Mrs. Bernice Adams, Mrs. Clarence Duncan and Miss Ida Duncan, all of Wilcox, visited in Maryville yesterday.

Miss Hilda Denny left this morning for Omaha where she will attend the physical education exhibit. While there she will be the guest of Misses Lucille Beason and Emma Holman.

Warren E. Bussing of St. Louis came this morning to visit his grandparents, Judge and Mrs. W. L. Johnson, and other relatives for several days.

Mrs. Ernest Wells and Mrs. Alva Hunt of Ravenwood were Maryville visiters yesterday.

COOLIDGE VETO IS BEATEN BY HOUSE

VOTES 313 TO 78 FOR SOLDIER BONUS BILL

IS UP TO SENATE NOW

President Sustains Most Decisive Legislative Defeat of Session—May Veto Tax Reduction

Washington, May 17—The soldier bonus bill, vetoed by President Coolidge two days ago with a message of strong denunciation, passed the House of Representatives this afternoon over that veto by a vote of 313 to 78.

It now goes to the Senate where indications are it will also pass over the President's disapproval although its foes are more hopeful of beating it there.

President Coolidge sustained his most decisive legislative defeat of the session by the House's action. Congress has heretofore disregarded his wishes concerning legislation, notably in the matter of tax reduction and immigration, but today's defeat marked the first time that either House has re-enacted a bill over his veto.

The fact that the President assailed the bonus in the most rigorous manner only accentuated the administration's defeat.

The size of the vote was surprising to the President's supporters. It had generally expected that the veto would be overridden, but even the bonus leaders themselves had not anticipated it could be passed over the veto by a 4-to-1 vote.

In rolling up a total of 313 votes, the bonus advocates had fifty-three and a fraction votes above the two-thirds necessary to pass it.

Three members voted, "present."

Washington, May 17—If Congress passes the soldier bonus bill over the President's veto, Mr. Coolidge may veto the tax reduction bill.

This intimation was given officially at the White House yesterday in reply to a question concerning the attitude of the executive on the tax measure in the light of the increase in government expenditures that would result if the vetoed bonus bill should become law.

It was said the action of congress on the bonus bill veto would have a vital bearing on the fate of the tax reduction measure. Manifestly, it was explained, if expenditures were increased, the extent to which taxes could be reduced would be lessened proportionately.

Mr. Coolidge estimates the bonus would cost not less than 114 million dollars a year for twenty years. Without counting the cost of the bonus, the deficit under the house tax bill in the fiscal year of 1925, according to administration leaders, would be between 50 million and 100 million dollars, compared with a surplus of 395 million that year under present tax rates. Under the senate bill the deficit would be 120 million dollars exclusive of the cost of teh bonus, according to the administration.

Opponents of the bonus promptly seized on the hint from the White House as an argument to win votes to sustain the President's veto of the bonus bill. Word has gone forth to wavering senators and representatives that if they want to save the tax reduction, which all the people want, they must sustain the veto of the bonus bill, which only a part of the people want. Much will be heard of this argument when the question of passing the bonus bill comes up in congress.

Fifty Years Ago

An effort is being made to perfect an organization for the celebration of the fourth of July at this place. Our citizens have always shown themselves liberal in this matter, and will certainly not be found behind in this instance.

The backward spring has detained our farmers materially about getting in their corn crop, but the weather is now favorable and is being taken advantage of. Everything considered, the prospects of Nodaway County for grain and fruit are better than they have been for several years.

In the vicinity of Pickering, there is a farmers' club which, in accordance of our view of the matter, acts on the right plan. At stated intervals the members of the club, with their wives and babies, meet at some member's house, look over his farm, talk over agricultural matters, have a good dinner and then go home contented. There are some of the best farmers in that section to be found anywhere in the county.

At the city election in Savannah a few days since, the ladies went to the polls and worked for the temperance ticket, but, notwithstanding, it was defeated by majorities ranging from 13 to 73.

Every traveling man that comes in has something to say about the magnificent fruit and wheat prospects in Northwest Missouri.

Remember that the election ordered by the Maryville Board of Education to decide on issuing bonds to the amount of $30,000 to establish a high school will take place on the 10th of June.

The result of Grant's veto of the currency bill is already being felt in the West. Yesterday morning, a number of hod carriers on the new brick on Thill's corner struck for $1.75 for second story and $2 for third. Who says Maryville is not a city now?

The True Story of Woodrow Wilson

BY DAVID LAWRENCE

CHAPTER XXIII

Why President Wilson Did Not Recommend War in 1915 and 1916 —How Neutrality Helped the Allies.

The general public did not know that Mr. Wilson was so set upon making a move for peace during the summer of 1916 that he actually framed peace proposals. He was dissuaded from making a peace offer, however, because of the belief that such a step might be considered as political—it might be interpreted it seemed as a gesture intended to improve his own chances for re-election and it might be construed abroad as without serious purpose because of the criticism certain to issue from political opponents.

So Mr. Wilson delayed his peace move until after the campaign and sent the note after he had been elected, November 1916, in the hope that his position would carry even greater weight because of a triumph at the polls.

But it was peace Mr. Wilson was thinking about in December 1916, and January 1917. When it became evident however that the fortunes of war were turning against the allies, that the Germans were planning a big drive, that the extremists in Germany were gaining the upper hand and that submarine warfare without restraint was to be sanctioned—then did Mr. Wilson begin to resign himself to the inevitable. There was a time in the early days of 1917 when he thought that the dismissal of the German ambassador would be sufficient warning to Germany that the United States must not be offended by further depredations on the high seas and he called in the author one day to ask him if the activities of the German ambassador as noted by the newspapermen had reached the point where they were compromising America's neutrality. It was true that the German ambassador conducted a propaganda, did all he could to influence American opinion in favor of Germany, but the author told the President that he did not believe the German ambassador was doing any more than some of the other ambassadors of the allied world in their efforts to influence American opinion during the presidential campaign.

The German proclamation of unrestricted submarine warfare gave the United States ample justification not only for the dismissal of Count von Bernstorff; the German ambassador, but the forthcoming declaration of war against the Imperial German government. The tide of battle was going against the allies and again Mr. Wilson hoped that America might be able by the very fact of her entering the war to force peace at an early date. It was for this reason that the President gave himself over utterly to the persecution of the war recommending at the very outset universal conscription and the extension of large loans materials and supplies to the allies. By this he hoped to break down the German morale.

Critics have risen to say that the United States should have gone to war when the Lusitania was sunk—all Europe still thinks, no doubt, that the two years of neutrality were due to vacillation, indecision or even timidity. But Mr. Wilson's reason for hesitation were due entirely to his belief that the United States must enter the war, if at all, with a united public opinion. So far as politics were concerned, he knew that the American people would surely reflect him in 1916 if he were commander-in-chief of their forces during the war. He knew he would gain politically if America entered the war during 1916—for it had been an old political saying that "the American people never swap horses in midstream."

The evidence is all against the European idea that the United States withheld its forces from use because of an indifference to the issues and fundamentals of the conflict abroad. American public opinion alone was Mr. Wilson's guide and he recommended a declaration of war only when he was convinced that the verdict was unanimous. From an altogether different viewpoint, however, it is possible to prove that the neutrality of the United States far from being a disadvantage to the allies was an asset of immeasurable value. The German historians who know the truth about von Tirpitz's plan for unrestricted submarine warfare as outlined in the latter part of 1914 are convinced that only the influence of the conservative element in the German foreign office, namely, the diplomats instead of the militarists, prevented the earlier adoption of unrestrained submarine warfare. Mr. Wilson's note-writing held the Germans at bay in the sense that they did not proclaim unrestricted warfare for at least two years. And the losses in tonnage which the allies suffered during the first few years was so serious and alarming that it does not require much stretch of the imagination to understand how distressing might have been the turn of affairs for the allies if the United States had been eliminated from Germany's thoughts so far as submarine operations were concerned and if the German navy had been turned loose to sink without trace everything in sight.

Could the United States have transported an army of 2,000,000 men to Europe if the British navy had not secured command of the seas? And would the British navy have achieved such mastery of the submarine if those two years had not been vouchsafed them in which to develop means of defense against the submarine? The military tactician and the naval strategist will have to answer those questions dispassionately but any one who knew the truth about submarine warfare during 1916 must admit that the allied losses were terrific and that had the Germans started a year earlier on unrestricted warfare the whole course of events might have been changed or at least the war itself prolonged because the United States would not have been able so quickly to transport its forces to Europe. So the Wilson policy did not have the effect of postponing the German's submarine warfare campaign until past the time when it could win the war.

Looking back over the neutrality period which preceded the entry of the United States into the war, the whole may be divided into three distinct epochs.

First there was the time when Mr. Wilson believed the war would come to an early conclusion and that by a carefully balancing of diplomatic notes against Germany on the one hand and the Allies on the other hand the legal record of neutrality might be scrupulously kept.

The second stage dates from the sinking of the Lusitania and continues through several months during which sharp-toned notes were exchanged with Germany with reference to submarine warfare.

The third, the last period, was that in which the United States hoped against hope that America's entry into the war would be unnecessary, but preparations were made by both the Army and Navy for the inevitable.

It was early in 1916 when Mr. Wilson realized that if he were to continue to threaten Germany effectively he must make some signs of war preparation. He called upon the Secretary of the Navy and the Secretary of War to take inventory of the state of the American fighting resources and Congress passed a law creating a Council of National Defense. To Colonel Roosevelt's way of thinking, not enough preparation had been made, but when war did break it was apparent that all the suggestions made, including those of Mr. Roosevelt for an army twice or three times the size of the then existing force was only a drop in the bucket compared to the huge force needed to wage the battle in Europe. Among the opponents of Mr. Wilson who were far sighted and wanted him to prepare for war, not a single plan suggested provided for an army of even one-twentieth the size of that which was finally mobilized by the United States.

The first epoch in the neutrality ended with the resignation of Secretary Bryan. Up to that time Mr. Wilson had given the impression that preparations for war on the part of the United States would be misconstrued abroad as an intention of the part of the United States to engage in the conflict, whereas the best assurance of continued neutrality was the introduction of no unusual items in the military or naval budget. The so-called pacifist element was pleased with Mr. Wilson's statements made in December 1914. The commitments made by the President in that direction kept William Jennings Bryan in the Cabinet as a warm supporter of Mr. Wilson's foreign policy. The sinking of the Lusitania in May 1915 began to work a change in the President's mind. He knew that the war spirit had not yet been kindled in the United States and he was confirmed in that feeling by careful analysis of the editorials of newspapers large and small from coast to coast. It is a singular thing that while a few people on the eastern seaboard were clamoring for war, a careful examination of the editorials showed that out of 1,000 compiled by telegraph in the three days after the Lusitania was sunk less than one-half dozen indicated a belief that war should be declared. Opinion was almost unanimous that the situation called for diplomacy and an effective expression of American feeling, with the hint, of course, that if satisfaction could not be secured the American people would be behind the President in whatever course he should formulate.

Reading the letters of ambassador Page in London on the reaction of European opinion to President Wilson's note writing one is convinced that the true state of mind on this side of the Atlantic was not accurately portrayed to those on the other side of the vast ocean—for America was not yet ready to go to war in May 1915.

During that month of May however there developed in Woodrow Wilson a feeling that moral force upon which he had been relying might some day be exhausted and that in its place there might have to be substituted the use of physical force.

Mr. Owl

BECOMING A CANDIDATE.

As the tactful old Southern negro said to his master, who had asked if he was elected to be saved, "We's never heerd of anybody bein' elected what wasn't a candidate."

Think that over a bit.

Look around you and you can find hundreds of people here in Maryville trying to be elected for prosperity without first becoming candidates.

They are the folks who have business needs and business opportunities without using the Want Ads to make themselves known.

The people of this city will do business with you, if you let them know you are ready.

He who would be elected for success in a way large or small must first let a Democrat-Forum Want Ad throw his hat in the ring.

Copyright, 1923, Associated Editors.

"STOP THAT AD OF MINE PLEASE."

Why; that we do not have to ask; for we know that it is just another case of a D-F Want Ad USER getting a result from the first day's insertion. This happens every day!

To try it, is to be convinced; just call Hanamo 42, or Farmers 114.

Famous Kentucky Derby Scheduled This Afternoon

The fiftieth annual race of the Kentucky Derby, the fifth race this afternoon on the Churchill Downs track at Louisville, Ky., was estimated to attract a crowd of from 80 to 85 thousand, according to advance reports. The Kentucky Derby, held every May, is conceded to be the greatest race during the year.

The West's best bet and upon which Westerners are putting hopes is Black Gold, owned by Mrs. R. M. Hoots, an Indian woman of Oklahoma City, Okla. The last price quoted on Black Gold was 4 to 1. The East is centering its attention on the Sinclair entry, Mad Play and Bracadale, price quoted at 2 to 1.

The Sinclair entry is this morning doped to win.

Other entries from the West are:

Other Eastern entries besides these of the oil magnate, H. F. Sinclair, are:

Much interest in the Derby is being held by several Maryville race fans, and the Racing Forum, which came in this morning, was much in demand.

Dr. C. P. Fryer, who has attended many Kentucky Derbys, said this morning that his favorites for the race were the Western entry, Black Gold, and Bracadale, the Sinclair entry from the East. Doctor Fryer said that the Derby this year was devoid of any outstanding horses, more so than in the past. He thought that if Bud Fisher had entered his mare, Nellie Morse, which won the Preakness, she would have had a good chance to win the Derby today.

As the Kentucky Derby is the fifth race this afternoon, it is hardly expected the result will be broadcast in time to get in today's issue. It is exeptced the result will be broadcast from the Kansas City Star station at 4:30 o'clock. The results will appear on the Democrat-Forum bulletin board.

Why Folks Paint and Decorate

1 Some paint to protect their property from decay; it being cheaper to paint than to replace rotted lumber.

2 Some paint and decorate to satisfy their wish for beauty and the artistic.

3 Others paint and decorate for sanitation and for cleanliness gain in that way.

4 Painting and decorating to gain better lighting effects is a common and a good reason.

5 To keep ones home as fresh and as well taken care of as neighbor's homes is the urge which prompts many to paint.

6 Painting and decorating to assure a quick sale of a property is a time-tested and proven plan.

Whatever your reason for painting, you'll be sure to get satisfaction and really good work from our shop at reasonable prices.

Here are the Reasons for the Power, Smoothness and Endurance of Oakland's Six-Cylinder Engine

1 Oakland's new six-cylinder L-head engine is of the most advanced design. Its remarkable performance is the logical result of competent engineering and high grade construction throughout.

2 The large, perfectly-balanced crankshaft runs in big, special, bronze-backed bearings. These patented bearings are positively the best that money can buy.

3 Lubrication is force feed by means of a reliable gear-type oil pump. Main, camshaft, and connecting-rod bearings and timing chain are continually bathed in oil. This positive lubrication adds greatly to quiet operation and long life.

4 Oakland cylinders are honed smooth as glass on special machines. Pistons and rings of the latest design are individually fitted into each cylinder with extreme care and precision. Vibration and wear are practically eliminated by this process.

5 The connecting rods are light and strong. The babbit-lined bearings are permanently bonded to each rod with pure tin—the most approved process and also the most expensive.

6 The camshaft is driven by a silent chain running in a bath of oil. This is conceded the best type of drive and the most accurate. There is a convenient external adjustment.

7 Oakland valves are of special heat-resisting alloy steel. So efficient are they, that valve grinding is necessary only at very rare intervals.

8 The intake manifold is scientifically designed to insure perfect fuel distribution to all cylinders, and therefore smooth, economical operation. There is a handy temperature adjustment for summer and winter.

9 The electrical system maintains Remy standards of excellence. The spark control is entirely automatic, which means that the engine will deliver the maximum of power under all conditions.

10 The single-plate disc clutch is simple and durable. It is self-adjusting for wear. Its smooth operation makes possible the remarkably easy gear shifting of the True Blue Oakland.
